Here are 10 marks of a prideful person:

- A lack of gratitude – Prideful people think they deserve what they get.
- Talking a lot – Prideful people have a lofty view of their own opinion, so they often like to share it.
- Talking about themselves – Prideful people focus on themselves in conversation because they view themselves as more important than others. Therefore, they don't often ask questions of others.
- Anger – Pride and anger go hand in hand. The angry person is upset that his so-called rights are violated.
- Having a high view of gifts and skills – Prideful people have a very elevated opinion of themselves.
- Boasting – Prideful people find ways to exalt themselves in their speech.
- Belittling and criticizing others – One way to exalt themselves is to belittle others. By making others look small, they can feel big.
- Unteachable – Prideful people do not listen to instruction or reproof because they aren't wrong.
- Lack of asking for forgiveness – Prideful people seldom admit their mistakes.
- Lack of Biblical prayer – Prideful people rely on themselves, so they seldom pray.
