Trust but verify

"Trust but verify" is a Russian proverb that was taught to Ronald Reagan when he was President and while he was negotiating with his counterpart, General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev, in the context of nuclear disarmament discussions with the Soviet Union between 1984 and 1987. Funny, given our current world circumstances, how some things repeat themselves.

In our daily life, we often find ourselves in a similar situation with people we come in contact with. Even loved ones in our life can disappoint and discourage us. But, there is One who can always be trusted. God has proven Himself over and over. He never lies, He always keeps His promises and He understands when we struggle with life. All He asks is that we Trust and Obey.
