Instructions

Print on card stock and cut one set of cutouts for each student or have students do the cutting if appropriate. Have students color the cutouts.

Give each student one piece of wide ribbon (30 inches long) and one rectangle of construction paper (4x6 inches). Have students glue the “sovereign” sign onto the construction paper to make a frame around the sign. Apply a small amount of glue to the top of the ribbon then press the sign onto the ribbon. In the same way, glue the pictures all the way down the ribbon about 1 inch apart, or you may want to staple the sign and the cutouts to the ribbon instead of gluing. NOTE: Do not use sheer ribbon or the glue will seep through.

Hole punch the sign near the top two corners. Put narrow ribbon or yarn through the two holes in the sign to make a loop for hanging.

Option: To add more color, you may want to glue 3x3-inch squares of construction paper behind each picture for a framed look.

Suggested Discussion

The servant wasn’t sure who the right woman would be for Isaac, so he prayed that God would show him who she was by what she would do.

- ? When he asked her for a drink, how would he know if she was the right one? She would offer to water his camels, too.

God listened to his prayer and brought Rebekah to the well at just the right time. She gave the servant a drink and also gave water to his camels, which was a hard job. But the servant knew she was the one when he found out she was also from Abraham’s family.

Just like the servant trusted God to direct him and show him what to do, we can always trust God to show us the right way, too.
