

You Are Called

Week 1 Devotional

Day 1

Reading: Romans 5:8; John 14:6; Romans 10:13
Devotional

The foundation of your calling is relationship. God did not simply invite you to be useful; He invited you to belong to Him. Many people think of salvation only as asking Jesus to be their Savior, but Scripture also calls us to receive Him as Lord. That means your life is no longer centered on your own plans, preferences, and ambitions. It is now surrendered to the One who gave His life for you.

Your calling flows from lordship. If Jesus is merely someone you go to when you need help, you may miss the deeper invitation to follow Him daily. But when Jesus is Lord, every part of your life becomes available to Him—your work, your family, your conversations, your talents, and your future.

You are not just saved from sin; you are saved into a relationship with the living God.

Application

Reflection: What parts of your life do you tend to keep separate from Jesus' lordship?

Action: Take a few minutes today to surrender one specific area of your life to the Lord—your work, your schedule, your attitude, your family, or your plans.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, thank You for calling me to Yourself. Help me not only to know You as Savior, but to follow You as Lord. Teach me to surrender every part of my life to You. Amen.

Day 2

Reading: Romans 8:28-30

Devotional

Pain, grief, loss, and hardship are real. The promise in this passage is not that every circumstance will feel good, but that God is able to work all things together for His good purpose in the lives of those who love Him. That purpose is bigger than comfort. God is shaping you to become more like Jesus. This means your calling is not just about what you do. It is also about who you are becoming. God may use your workplace, your family, your struggles, your waiting seasons, and even your disappointments to form Christlike character in you.

Sometimes people miss their calling because they are waiting for something "bigger" or "better." But God often develops your calling through faithfulness in what is already in front of you. The small acts of obedience matter. The unseen service matters. The difficult assignment matters. God is not wasting your life. He is working in you so He can work through you.

Application

Reflection: How many times do you overlook what God may be doing in your current circumstances because you are waiting for a different opportunity?

Action: Identify one ordinary responsibility in your life today and choose to do it with faithfulness, patience, and a Christlike attitude.

Prayer: Father, help me trust that You are working in my life even when I do not understand everything. Shape me to look more like Jesus, and help me be faithful where You have placed me. Amen.

Day 3

Reading: 1 Peter 2:9-10

This passage was not written only to pastors, missionaries, or church leaders. It was written to believers. That means if you belong to Christ, these words describe you. You are chosen. You are part of a royal priesthood. You are God's possession. You have received mercy. And because of that, your life is meant to proclaim something about Him.

To proclaim does not only mean standing on a stage or teaching a Bible study. Your life proclaims something every day. Your attitude at work says something. Your patience with difficult people says something. Your integrity when no one is watching says something. Your willingness to serve says something.

God called you out of darkness, but He did not remove you from every dark place. Instead, He sends you into the world as someone who carries His light. Your workplace, school, neighborhood, and family may be places where the light of Christ is desperately needed. You can live in such a way that people see something different in you.

Application

Reflection: What kind of message does your life proclaim to the people around you each day?

Action: Look for one opportunity today to reflect the light of Christ through encouragement, patience, generosity, or truth.

Prayer: God, thank You for calling me out of darkness and into Your marvelous light. Help me live in a way that points people to You. Use my words, actions, and attitude to proclaim Your goodness. Amen.

Day 4

Reading: Ephesians 2:8-10; 2 Timothy 1:9

Devotional

Grace does not only save you from something; grace saves you for something. You are not saved by your works, but you are saved for good works. That distinction matters. You do not serve God to earn His love. You serve because you have already received His love.

Ephesians 2:10 says you are God's workmanship. That means your life has been intentionally crafted by God. Your personality, abilities, experiences, skills, and spiritual gifts are not accidents. God has entrusted them to you for His purposes. God gives gifts, abilities, and opportunities so that others may be blessed and He may be glorified. This changes how you see your job, your income, your skills, and your influence. They are not merely for personal comfort or success. They are tools God has placed in your hands. Whether your role feels visible or hidden, important or ordinary, God can use it when it is surrendered to Him.

Your calling is holy because it comes from God. The task may seem common, but obedience makes it sacred.

Application

Reflection: What skills, gifts, or opportunities has God placed in your hands that could bless others?

Action: Choose one gift or ability you have and intentionally use it this week to serve someone else.

Prayer: Lord, thank You for saving me by grace and creating me for good works. Help me recognize the gifts You have given me and use them for Your glory, not just my own benefit. Amen.

Day 5

Reading: John 10:1-3; 2 Corinthians 5:10

Devotional

God's call is not vague or distant. Jesus says the Shepherd calls His sheep by name. That means He knows you personally. He knows your story, your weaknesses, your strengths, your fears, your opportunities, and your circle of influence. You are not just one face in a crowd. You are known by God.

Because He knows you, He also leads you. Sometimes His leading comes through obvious opportunities. Other times it comes through ordinary interruptions—a conversation, a need, a burden, a person in front of you. The question is whether you are listening for His voice and willing to respond.

2 Corinthians 5:10 reminds believers that our lives matter. This judgment is not about whether Christians go to heaven or hell. It is about faithfulness. God has entrusted each of us with opportunities, gifts, relationships, and assignments. One day, our lives will be measured according to what we did with what He gave us. That truth should not lead to fear, but to focus. God wants you to live out your calling even more than you do. He is not trying to hide His will from you. He invites you to walk with Him, listen to Him, and serve Him wherever you are.

Your calling may not always have a title. But every day, you are invited to show up, listen, serve, speak, love, and obey.

Application

Reflection: How often do you move through your day without considering that God may have placed someone in front of you for a purpose?

Action: Before beginning your day, ask God to make you sensitive to one opportunity to serve, encourage, pray, or speak truth.

Prayer: Jesus, thank You for knowing me by name and leading me as my Shepherd. Help me hear Your voice and respond with obedience. Teach me to serve faithfully with what You have entrusted to me. Amen.
