How do you know you are struggling with pride? What are the symptoms of being proud? To help you answer these questions and get rid of pride in your heart, evaluate yourself by checking out the following signs:

1. You think you are humble.

One of the signs that you are proud of is that you refuse to admit that you struggle with pride. Therefore, calling yourself “humble” is actually false humility.

To avoid this, stop telling yourself—or others—that you are humble. If that is true, then let others acknowledge that.

2. You do not accept constructive criticisms.

Proud people have a hard time accepting failures. For this reason, they refuse to be corrected. They are offended whenever their behaviors or outputs are scrutinized.

Instead of being insulted, be thankful when others correct you because it will help you improve. But, remember, you are not perfect.

3. You always want to be the center of attention.

One sign of being proud is when you always want attention and appreciation. You feel like you are the center of the universe, so everyone should turn their eyes and ears to you.

If this is your case, then it is time to stop living in the illusion that everyone adores you. Do not think that you are more important than anyone else. Instead, try living a low-key life.

4. You are vain about your physical appearance.

Being obsessed about making yourself attractive is another hint of pride creeping into you. In connection with no. 3, vanity makes you flaunt your beauty, hoping that everyone will admire you.

It is okay to take care of yourself and evaluate your motive for being attractive. However, if it is to draw attention to yourself, maybe it is time to re-orient yourself about real beauty.

5. You do not like associating with the “ordinary” or unpopular.

Whenever you go to an event, which kind of people do you usually want to sit with? Do you immediately look for the table where the “elite” sit around? If you think you only deserve professionals and “first-class” citizens for your friends and avoid hanging out with “low-level” people, then you are clearly prideful.

To get rid of this attitude, be equal in treating people. Make friends not according to social status, but the sincerity of individuals towards you. Associating with people who do not have any title attached to their names will not make you cheap.

6. You are fond of name-dropping.

If you have the habit of talking about your connections with influential, rich, or powerful personalities, then you are certainly proud. Bragging about being connected with such people makes you feel entitled to yourself.

The people you talk with are probably annoyed listening about your “connections” already. If you admit you struggle with this, be more conscious of controlling yourself from talking much.

7. You are not teachable.

Not listening to someone who is trying to teach you something is another sign of pride. It is either you think you know things already, or you think you know more than the person. It could also mean you consider him/her inferior to you.

Having a teachable heart is one trait of humility. Whether you seem more knowledgeable than the person trying to teach you or you actually know about the “lesson” already, make sure that you show respect by listening attentively and not trying to cut him/her off.

8. You do not listen to others’ advice.

Prideful people are also stubborn. They think they know everything already, so they disregard the counsel of others. You are one of them if you brush off the advice of your parents, some elders, or anyone else.

Renew your character by starting to listen to your parents or the mature people surrounding you. Even if you disagree with what they say, give time to weigh your decision against their words of wisdom.

9. You do not like to be surpassed by anyone.

Considering others as threats to your position, fame, and success is a result of pride. Your achievements could have gotten into your head already that you think you should always be the no. 1. Thus, when you meet people who have the potential to beat your accomplishments, you consider them as rivals.

Competition is only healthy if you compete with your past self. So instead of focusing on being ahead of others, why not focus on improving yourself?

10. You think you are too important to do mundane things.

If you think your position is so high that you cannot pick up trash, help clean up, or serve others, that is definitely pride.

Do not let entitlement make you feel like you are more important than anyone else. Great people are not afraid to serve those who are less fortunate than them.

11. You are critical to those who do better than you.

One symptom of pride that you should watch out for is being critical towards others, especially those you are insecure with. Pointing out their flaws makes you feel better about yourself and better than them.

Bitterness is the result of pride stepped on. Whenever you feel resentment towards someone who did better than you, keep yourself from thinking or saying bad comments about the person. Instead, give appreciation and be happy for him/her.

Healthy Pride is Good

Not all pride is bad. It can be good.

Good pride is a healthy, positive attitude towards ourselves and our lives. It does not mean thinking we are better than others or that we should be treated differently.

1. Self-confidence is a good pride

We should be confident, not arrogant. Confident people are realistic. They know what they can do well and try to do it often, but they also recognize what they cannot do and try to avoid those things.

2. Self-respect is a healthy pride

This is the most important aspect of healthy pride. We should respect ourselves by respecting others. Treating others well helps us feel better about ourselves, while ignoring or mistreating others makes us feel worse.

3. A positive outlook on life

If we believe our lives will be better in the future, we are more likely to make it so. Unfortunately, some people get stuck in their past and cannot see their lives getting any better. They have a negative outlook on life and feel trapped. This can be changed with some effort.

4. self-esteem

We all have things we are good at and enjoy doing. However, we also have bad habits or skills that we can improve. Self-esteem includes recognizing both of these sides to ourselves.

Healthy pride comes from within: we should be proud of what we accomplish without feeling that we deserve special treatment. Healthy pride comes from God: when he made us in his image, he gave us value and worth; he expects nothing less than excellence from us as well!

5. Optimism

Optimists believe that good things will happen in their lives if they work hard for them. Therefore, we tend to be more optimistic when working towards something worthwhile rather than just trying to get through the day without too much trouble.

Achieving goals helps us feel more positive about ourselves and feel motivated to set new goals because of this success.

6. Those with healthy pride lead, motivate, and inspire others.

They do not use their success as a way to put others down. On the contrary, they want the good of everyone to be achieved and are willing to support the efforts of others towards this end.

These people are committed, involved citizens and positive contributors in all aspects of society.

They know what they are capable of, what they can achieve, so they try it. Others see this effort and self-confidence and want to be part of it, inspiring others to succeed in whatever way possible.

7. Being able to take care of yourself.

Healthy pride means taking care of yourself and being grateful for the opportunities you have been given in life. For instance: being thankful for your family, education, job, etc. Having healthy pride means that you do not need to compare yourself with others – you are enough on your own!

People with healthy pride can see their own flaws and weaknesses. They also have the ability to assess the value of others even more than themselves because they have a more realistic view of life.

Because of this, they can make focused efforts to help themselves, improve themselves as well as helping others achieve their goals.

This positive attitude allows us the freedom to pursue goals rather than just surviving or getting by on a day-to-day basis. In return, we may find happiness instead of sorrow when pursuing our ambitions!

What do the Bible verses say about pride?

All who fear the LORD will hate evil. Therefore, I hate pride and arrogance, corruption, and perverse speech. (Proverbs 8:13, NLT)

Pride goes before destruction, a haughty spirit before a fall. Better to be lowly in spirit along with the oppressed than to share plunder with the proud. (Proverbs 16:18-19, NIV)

So do not become proud, but fear. (Romans 11:18-20, ESV)

One's pride will bring him low, but he who is lowly in spirit will obtain honor. (Proverbs 29:23, ESV)

When pride comes, then comes disgrace, but with humility comes wisdom. (Proverbs 11:2, NIV)

The LORD detests all the proud of heart. Be sure of this: They will not go unpunished. (Proverbs 16:5, NIV)

Live in harmony with each other. Don't be too proud to enjoy the company of ordinary people. And don't think you know it all! (Romans 12:16, NLT)

Where there is strife, there is pride, but wisdom is found in those who take advice. (Proverbs 13:10, NIV)

Let someone else praise you, not your own mouth— a stranger, not your own lips. (Proverbs 27:2, NLT)

Haughty eyes, a proud heart, and evil actions are all sin. (Proverbs 21:4, NLT)

Humble yourselves before the Lord, and he will lift you up in honor. (James 4:10, NLT)
