

Sermon Highlights

Sermon Summary:

This sermon explores the state of humanity before the Great Flood, drawing parallels between that time and our current world. It emphasizes the pervasive nature of sin, God's grief over human wickedness, and the importance of finding grace through faith. Pastor Bruce Gordon warns against following worldly desires and urges listeners to seek God's way, particularly in matters of marriage and personal conduct. The sermon concludes with a powerful message about the necessity of accepting God's grace through faith in Jesus Christ.

Key Points:

- Sin is universally destructive and grieves God's heart
- God's way, especially in marriage, is the best path for long-term happiness
- Human arrogance and wickedness lead to divine judgment
- God offers grace and time for repentance before judgment
- Faith in God's promises, not personal righteousness, is the path to salvation
- The world today mirrors the wickedness of Noah's time
- God's grace is available, but must be received through faith
