These genes that are passed down tell us what we're going to look like, how tall we're going to be, what color our hair is. Somewhere there is a gene that says, “Tall/bald/Be neat/organized/talent”. But just as good characteristics can be passed down so can negative characteristics.

•For years we thought, "Well, too bad. It's in my genes: depression, addictions, low self-esteem. Nothing I can do about it".

•Recently researchers have discovered something they call epigenetics. "On top of the genes". What they found is just because a gene has been passed down doesn't mean that it has to be activated. We cannot deactivate what color our hair will be or the shape of our eyes, there are certain genes that we can, in effect, turn on or turn off.

What's interesting is Hemmingway's father took his life in 1928.*

•What would have happened way back there in the '20's if the father would have deactivated the suicide gene?

•What if he would have taken authority over that tormenting spirit and activated the faith gene, the victory gene, the more than a conqueror gene, He could have broken the generational curse and started a generational blessing!

• I am not going to live my life addicted, angry, defeated, depressed. I am not passing down that negative baggage. I'm choosing life. I'm choosing blessings. I'm going defeat my giants so my kids don't have to!

• Could it be that if you don't put an end to what you're dealing with your family will still be struggling with it hundreds of years from now?
