

A woman with long, wavy blonde hair, wearing a dark green top and a black leather jacket, sits on the left. She has a serious expression. To her right, a man with dark, curly hair, wearing a dark suit, white shirt, and a blue and green patterned tie, sits with his hands raised in a gesture of surprise or disbelief. The background is a blue-lit studio set with decorative elements.

Jacob thought he was marrying Rachel but he got stuck with Leah. He loved Rachel; he endured Leah. Yet Leah was fertile and produced many children, including Judah, the tribe that led to the birth of Jesus Christ.

With Rachel, it was love at first sight. With Leah, he had to learn to love her. Your harvest will come from the least attractive things in your life, things you have to learn to love. Sunday is my Rachel. The week, at times, is my Leah. But actual growth happens during the week. Preaching is my Rachel. Fasting is my Leah. I don't grow when I preach, but when I fast.

Atlar calls are Rachels. Phone calls are Leahs. Sunday praise teams are Rachels. Rehearsals are Leahs. Sermons are Rachels. Home bible studies are Leahs.

Eventually, you're married to both. But you better learn how to love Leah because that's where your multiplication is coming from. You're spending all your time and effort to win Rachel, but in the end, Christ is coming through Leah.
