

SERMON SERIES: SUMMER PLAYLIST

SPEAKER: JASON EPPERSON

DATE: August 1, 2021

Key Line

“Psalm 150”

Introduction

This week we are wrapping up our Summer Playlist series. Last week we looked at Psalm 51 and learned that God wants to cleanse our hearts because He is merciful and loving. This week, we are looking at Psalm 150 to learn about how we can be praising God for who He is.

- Are there songs you find yourself singing on a daily basis? What are they?

Seek the Word

Read Psalm 150.

- What does verse 2 say God should be praised for?
 - Can you list a few of the mighty deeds that God has done in the Bible?
- What does this psalm tell us about how God should be praised?
- This psalm is praising God for His characteristics. What are some traits of God that He can be praised for?

Go Deeper

The psalms are broken up into different genres. One of these genres is psalms of praise, which is what Psalm 150 is. Search through the book of Psalms to find other psalms of praise. Create a list of the psalms of praise you've found. What sorts of things are they praising God for? How do the authors of those psalms praise God?

Talk About It

- This psalm is praising God for who He is. Is it easier for you to praise God for who He is or what He has done for you?
- Why do you think it is important for us to praise God for who He is and His characteristics?
- David was a musician, so he used his musical gifts to praise God. How would your life look if you consistently praised God with your actions?
- How can you remind yourself to praise God for who He is despite your current circumstances?

Wrap Up

Reminder: Praising God for who He is keeps us humble.

Challenge: This week, create a brief list of some of God's characteristics and mighty deeds. After creating this list, place it somewhere you will see often as a reminder to praise Him for who He is.
