A PRAYING PEOPLE IMPACTING A LOST WORLD

Healthcare Missions and the Missionary Task

THE MISSIONARY'S TASK INCLUDES ENTRY, EVANGELISM, DISCIPLING NEW BELIEVERS, TRAINING LEADERS, AND FORMING HEALTHY CHURCHES. CARING FOR NEEDS OF PEOPLE IS AN INTEGRAL PART OF EACH OF THESE. HEALTHCARE MISSIONS GIVES ACCESS TO THE UNREACHED, ALLOWS INTIMATE CONVERSATIONS, MEETS NEEDS, MAKES DISCIPLES, AND EMPOWERS THE CHURCH.

From clinic to church: Medical workers gain villagers' trust then share the gospel

A volunteer nurse checks a woman's blood pressure during a medical exam at a clinic.

A village on the edge of a mega-city was a spiritually hard place, hostile to missionaries and their usual entry approaches. But the village leaders recognized that their people needed good medical care. So they gave permission for healthcare workers to conduct a free medical clinic as long as they did not share the gospel. The clinic event was successful, and the village leaders were honored for making it possible. Based on the trust that they gained through the successful clinic, the healthcare workers were welcomed for follow-up visits in homes where they could pray and share the gospel with people in private. Many were healed of their afflictions and believed in Jesus Christ. A Bible study began in one of the homes, and from that, a small group of believers were discipled and baptized. Thus, a new church was planted, and a leader soon emerged. The next step was to train the new believers to tell their faith stories to those who were close to them but far from God. The church grew! Soon it became the base for outreach events that employed another health strategy – women's health and hygiene trainings. Women of the church invited lost family and friends to these events, and some became believers who then began house groups in their own villages. Many leaders and teams have been developed. Now the new church sends out teams to share the gospel, baptize, and train others. Already, the church in that once-hard place has multiplied to the fourth generation. Praise God for these new churches, and pray for continued multiplication.

From unengaged to engaged: Healthcare missions among a UUPG

In a predominantly Muslim area, workers invested in training local women about health strategies and faith-sharing tools. The women who received this training then gathered other women and taught them about women's health, the sanctity of life, breast cancer detection, and the gospel. One of the women who was trained focused on reaching an unengaged, unreached people group (UUPG). She leveraged her business to offer them small trainings. One woman who attended her trainings was from the UUPG, and she invited others. In time, several women of this UUPG believed and were baptized. They met together for worship and discipleship. They also prayed for their unbelieving husbands. During COVID-19, the men began to attend some gatherings. Some of the men believed, and eight were baptized. Today, there are at least two churches among this people group, who are no longer unengaged! Pray for believers in these churches to tell their stories, and that these two churches will reproduce.

“And Jesus went throughout all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom and healing every disease and every affliction.”

(Matthew 9:35 ESV)

From death to life: A man finds Jesus in a medical clinic

A man walked into a clinic with chest pain then suddenly collapsed onto the floor. Medical workers gave him CPR, and he regained consciousness, and his vital signs stabilized. While waiting for the ambulance that would take the man to a hospital, a medical worker asked him, “How are you doing?” The man began to sob and said that he would come back after treatment at the hospital and believe in Jesus. “Why wait?” the worker said. Immediately, the man asked Jesus to take away his sin, and he gave his life to God. The worker asked when the man first became interested in God's story, and he pointed to the floor where he had collapsed. He said that he had never been interested before, but when he collapsed, he heard God call his name three times. He said God was warning him. Since then, the man has recovered and is excited about his new faith in Jesus, who saved his life and his soul on the same day. Pray for this new believer to abide in Jesus and grow in faith. Pray that this man's faith will grow steadily and that he will have many opportunities to tell his story.
