Unassuming warehouse in California turns out to be illegal Chinese-run virus laboratory that was genetically engineering mice and experimenting with HIV, herpes and malaria

A central California city is reeling after a nondescript warehouse turned out to be an illegal lab with deadly pathogens, including coronavirus, HIV, and malaria. If it were not for an errant hose sticking out of the back of the warehouse last spring, city officials would not have known that a shady biotech company with links to China had set up shop there, filling it with industrial freezers, hundreds of vials of viruses, and about 1,000 dead and dying lab mice.

Government investigators also found Covid diagnostic and pregnancy tests at the underground testing facility that they believed were being developed there, in addition to at least 20 stored infectious agents, including coronavirus, HIV, hepatitis, and herpes.

We Just Found A Secret Chinese Bio-Lab Near A Major U.S. Base - How Many More Are There?

You know what's even better than releasing a dangerous and highly contagious virus in a city in China and then relying upon the natural spread of the virus from human to human to carry the disease into the heart of the United States? Releasing a dangerous and highly contagious virus on American soil in proximity to critical American military facilities.

This secret lab apparently went into operation in late 2022. It was run by a company called Prestige Biotech which is licensed in Nevada but has no license to operate in California. The head of Prestige is a guy named Wang Ziuquin Yao whose address is also in Nevada. Other addresses provided for identified authorized agents were either empty offices or addresses in China that could not be verified.

“Reedley officials and personnel from CDPH and FCDPH executed a warrant on March 16 to inspect the warehouse at 850 I Street,” MidValley Times reported. “According to a declaration from Humero Prado, Assistant Director of Fresno County Public Health, which was filed in superior court, investigators discovered that one room of the warehouse was used to produce COVID-19 and pregnancy tests. In other rooms, investigators found blood, tissue, and other bodily fluid samples. They also found thousands of vials that contained unlabeled fluids.

Meet Dr. Fauci’s Replacement: A Staunch Advocate of Lockdowns, Mask Mandates & Forced Vaccinations

Move over, Dr. Fauci. There’s a new embodiment of “The Science” in town.

Federal officials on Wednesday announced the appointment of Dr. Jeanne Marrazzo as the incoming director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID). This position was previously held by Dr. Anthony Fauci.

Presently serving as the director of the Division of Infectious Diseases at UAB, Dr. Marrazzo gained substantial visibility through her numerous media appearances during the COVID-19 pandemic. She joined UAB in 2016, transferring from the University of Washington, and possesses substantial expertise in the field of sexually transmitted infections, including HIV.

In August 2021, Dr. Marrazzo issued an ‘apocalyptic’ warning about Covid-19 and issued the following advice.

“Please consider wearing a mask when you go out,” she said, “You don’t need to wear one when you’re at home. Masks in young people going to school over the age of six. All the things we’ve been talking about, mask, wearing, hand hygiene, and social distancing.”

“Masks have contributed to the control of this pandemic in other communities,” she added. “Even mask wearing, except when you’re eating, you can prevent it with very good masks. Three basic rules. Wear a mask. Make sure you wash your hands frequently or use hand sanitizer and keep your distance.”

Virtually everything the experts advised about the Covid pandemic turned out to be wrong. Masks did not prevent the spread of SARS-CoV-2, which proved to be nearly universal in exposure.

The New Face Of Eugenics?: AI To Be Used To Sort Human Embryos Into Categories Of ‘Fit’ And ‘Unfit’ For IVF

On Monday, I wrote an article highlighting a horrifying story surrounding a surrogate mom who, after she was diagnosed with breast cancer, was pressured to abort the baby she was hired to carry. In that blog, I claimed that this “baby was treated as nothing more than a commodity to be had or discarded at the will of two adults” —but that terrible story is not the only example of this commodification of children.

The Christian Post recently highlighted a new technology called EMA that uses artificial intelligence (AI) to “rul[e] out which [embryos] are unsuitable for a successful pregnancy.” So this new technology uses AI to sort through already-created embryos to determine which ones show the most “promise” and should be implanted inside the womb. What is this software looking for? Well, EMA “scores them based on features such as genetic abnormalities, gender or the odds of successful implantation.”

New Minnesota Law That Gov Tim Walz Signed Bill Lets Babies Die Who Survive Abortions

Today a law goes into effect hiding from the public the fate of infants who survive abortion. Under the new version of Minnesota’s abortion reporting law, practitioners of abortion will no longer report when abortions result in live births and what measures are taken to care for such infants. The change comes as the legislature has also repealed a guarantee that born-alive infants receive appropriate lifesaving care.

Lawmakers this year also repealed Minnesota's requirement that reasonable measures be taken to "preserve the life and health" of born-alive infants, replacing it with a requirement for "care," which the bill's House author, Rep. Tina Liebling (DFL-Rochester), has described as mere "comfort" care. Under the new language, an infant could be denied lifesaving care and allowed to die.

Scary: One in Six Democrats Believes Violence Is Justified To Restore Abortion

One in every six Democrats believes that "force is justified to restore abortion rights," a new poll has found, underscoring the secular Left's growing support for political violence.

The number of Democrats backing abortion-related terrorism has doubled, from 8% to 16% since January -- a period when multiple states have enacted pro-life protections. In all, 31 million Americans support the use of violence to reinstate abortion in U.S. law, up from 22 million just three months ago, according to a survey from the University of Chicago's Chicago Project on Security and Threats (CPOST) released this month.

The same percentage of Democrats agrees that "force is justified to prevent Donald Trump from becoming president," as well as to "coerce Congress or government officials."

Support for violence against Congress began to rise after Republicans took control of the House of Representatives. "Public support for the use of force to coerce members of the US Congress grew from 9 percent in January 2023 to 17 percent as of June 26, 2023, effectively doubling.

While increasing across the political spectrum, the rise was sharpest among Democrats where it grew by about 2.5 times," the report notes. That translates to 44 million Americans willing to justify domestic terrorism to influence legislation.

The Left has engaged in more than theoretical support for abortion-based violence (a redundant phrase). There have been at least 67 attacks against pro-life pregnancy resource centers since the still-unsolved leak of the Supreme Court's Dobbs decision last May, including the vandalism of Republican Congressman Tim Walberg's Michigan offices (which shares space with a pro-life organization) last June 21 and the firebombing of a CompassCare office in New York two weeks earlier.

Churches have also borne the brunt of the onslaught. Family Research Council's Arielle Del Turco has documented a total of 543 attacks against churches between January 2018 and March 2023 -- including 57 abortion-related assaults on churches in the first nine months of 2022 and numerous attacks related to LGBTQ issues, often in tandem with legislation protecting children from the predatory transgender industry.

Worse yet, the Department of Homeland Security has warned that churches face an elevated threat of violence until at least the 2024 election, 15 months from now, due to their stance on "sociopolitical issues."

The new report points to the broad, deep, and metastasizing problem of politically motivated violence, especially on the Left. Radicals threatened to kill and dismember Sonja Shaw, president of the Chino Valley (California) Unified School District Board of Education, after the district defied Democratic Governor Gavin Newsom and prevented teachers from hiding a child's gender transition from his or her parents.

Christian arrested while reading Bible aloud at LGBTQ event preaches at city meeting: 'We are all going to stand before God one day'

The young Christian man who was arrested while reading from the Bible on a loudspeaker outside a "family entertainment" drag show in Watertown, Wisconsin, over the weekend has not been deterred. He then spoke at a city meeting a few days later and continued sharing the message of the gospel.

On Saturday afternoon, Marcus Schroeder and some of his fellow members of Mercy Seat Christian Church went to the so-called "Pride in the Park" celebration in Watertown to evangelize the crowd and protest the sexualization of children. The event was billed as "family entertainment," but Christians at the event reported seeing drag queens wearing lingerie and dancing lasciviously near "little children."

Schroeder, who had been reading passages from Galatians over a loudspeaker while standing on a public sidewalk outside the event, was arrested and charged with unlawful use of sound amplification and resisting arrest. Four other Christians were detained as well, and at least one of them received a citation that she intends to fight.

If the arresting officers of city officials hoped that the arrest would deter Schroeder and his Christian friends, they were wrong. Schroeder then attended the Watertown Common Council meeting on Tuesday to defend his actions at the event and to explain the inimitable role that God and Christianity play in keeping social order, referencing a group of neo-Nazis, who also attended the Pride event, to illustrate his point.

"What's wrong with Nazism?" Schroeder asked the audience at the city meeting. He then answered his own question: "The God of scripture says that we are made in his image, and so to murder innocent people is a violation of God's commands."

Schroeder then used the concept of the inherent dignity of the human person to explain why hedonism and unfettered sexuality are likewise wrong. Without God and his prescribed law, human beings are simply "animals" with no real "value," Schroeder said. And if there is no law proscribing human sexuality, then there is no reason not to descend into feral, animal-like promiscuity, he suggested.

But God does exist, Schroeder claimed, as does his law, and the only way to maintain a decent and civilized society is to submit ourselves to it. "As a culture, we can have our disagreements, but understand that we are all going to stand before God one day," Schroeder said. "And we're going to have to give an account for what we have done with the children in our society."

He also explained that he has had many conversations with pro-LGBTQ advocates and that he and other Christians like him do not "hate" those people. They simply want them to turn to God and stop violating children's innocence. "I completely understand the other side. I want to understand the other side," Schroeder said at the city meeting. "But drag queens twerking on kids, in lingerie, is unacceptable."

Schroeder later told the Sentinel that he intends to continue sharing the gospel as much as possible. "Jesus told us to disciple the nations and teach them to obey all that Christ has commanded us, and part of the nations includes the culture," he said. "It's not that we're just trying to get political. This is God's world, and people have to live by God's rules. So we're here to take a stand for justice."

Michigan House passes bill that could make using wrong pronouns a felony, fineable up to $10,000

Under the new bill, 'intimidating' an individual in regards to their gender identity can result in prison time or a $10,000 fine

A recently passed bill in Michigan could make it a felony to intimidate someone by intentionally using the wrong gender pronouns, according to some legal experts.

Michigan's state House of Representatives has passed bill HB 4474, a piece of legislation that criminalizes causing someone to feel threatened by words.

Under the new bill, offenders are "guilty of a felony punishable by imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or by a fine of not more than $10,000."

"'Intimidate' means a willful course of conduct involving repeated or continuing harassment of another individual that would cause a reasonable individual to feel terrorized, frightened, or threatened, and that actually causes the victim to feel terrorized, frightened, or threatened," the bill reads.

The bill specifically addresses "sexual orientation" and "gender identity or expression" as protected classes.

According to the bill, "'Gender identity or expression' means having or being perceived as having a gender-related self-identity or expression whether or not associated with an individual's assigned sex at birth."

UN "Summit of the Future" Plans to Empower "UN 2.0"

The United Nations is gearing up for a massive "Summit of the Future" that will radically empower the UN and its agencies as part of transforming the global organization into what its leaders are calling UN 2.0, warns The New American magazine Senior Editor Alex Newman in this episode of Behind the Deep State. Citizens everywhere are in the crosshairs. The upcoming conference will bring together presidents, dictators, prime ministers and potentates to consider a range of "Our Common Future" policy proposals from UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres, a well-known socialist. All of those plans are aimed at giving new and stronger authorities to the UN under the guise of fighting emergencies, protecting the planet, considering the interests of young people, and more. But as Alex warns, these are all just excuses to undermine national sovereignty and individual liberty while consolidating power at the global level.

Worldcoin - Another Step To Global Biometric ID

Have you had your eyes scanned by "The Orb" yet? All it takes is just one trip, and once your biometric data is in the database you will receive some free money and a new "digital identity" that you will be able to use all over the Internet. Doesn't that sound grand?

As you will see below, hundreds of thousands of people in Europe have already signed up. Those that have created Worldcoin intend for it to be "a new identity and financial network" that is owned by everyone on the entire planet. The following comes directly from the official Worldcoin website...

More than three years ago we founded Worldcoin with the ambition of creating a new identity and financial network owned by everyone; the rollout begins today. If successful, we believe Worldcoin could drastically increase economic opportunity, scale a reliable solution for distinguishing humans from AI online while preserving privacy, enable global democratic processes, and eventually show a potential path to AI-funded UBI.

Worldcoin says will allow companies, governments to use its ID system

Worldcoin will expand its operations to sign up more users globally and aims to allow other organisations to use its iris-scanning and identity-verifying technology, a senior manager for the company behind the project told Reuters.

Co-founded by OpenAI CEO Sam Altman, Worldcoin launched last week, requiring users to give their iris scans in exchange for a digital ID and, in some countries, free cryptocurrency as part of plans to create a "identity and financial network".

In sign-up sites around the world, people have been getting their faces scanned by a shiny spherical "orb", shrugging off privacy campaigners' concerns that the biometric data could be misused. Worldcoin says 2.2 million have signed up, mostly during a trial period over the last two years. Data watchdogs in Britain, France and Germany have said they are looking into the project.

"We are on this mission of building the biggest financial and identity community that we can," said Ricardo Macieira, general manager for Europe at Tools For Humanity, the San Francisco and Berlin-based company behind the project.

Israeli report warns Iran is helping Syria develop chemical weapons

The report suggests that 'Hezbollah's use of chemical weapons in the next confrontation with Israel cannot be ruled out'

In a report published on Wednesday, Israeli researchers suggested that Iran is helping Syria build its arsenal of chemical and advanced weapons for possible use by the Islamic Republic, its proxies, and Russia.

High-speed rail to bring pilgrims from Saudi Arabia to Third Temple by 2040

This week, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu announced a $27 billion plan to link the north and south of the country by rail. When complete, the proposed high-speed rail line will run about 400 kilometers (250 miles) from the northern city of Kiryat Shmona to the southern city of Eilat.

Several Jewish sources point to the success of this project as an essential part of geula (redemption). A story is told about Rabbi Yehoshua Leib Diskin, a leading rabbi in Jerusalem in the late 19th century who heard the whistle of the first train to arrive in Jerusalem in 1892 and said, "They are clearing the way for Moshiach (Messiah) and the geula (redemption) is on the way."

Rabbi Yekutiel Fish, who writes a geula and Kabbalah blog in Hebrew called Sod HaChashmal (the secret energy)

"A high-speed train is precisely what is needed for Passover, when all of Israel is required to bring their sacrifice to the Temple," Fish told Israel365 News. " Hashem (God, literally 'the name') is preparing the way for the pilgrims to arrive at the Temple."

Prophecy fulfilled? Foxes spotted in Jerusalem's Old City on Ninth of Av

In a clear sign of the imminent rebuilding of the Temple in Jerusalem, a fox was spotted near the Zion Gate in the Old City on the evening of Tisha B'Av, the day commemorating the destruction of the two Temples.

The fox was photographed by Barak Blumenthal as he toured the city on the auspicious day.

While not miraculous, foxes generally avoid cities and populated areas. Indeed, the sighting comes when Jerusalem was full of people coming to commemorate the day. In 2019, several foxes were spotted on the Temple Mount during the nine days of austerity leading up to the Ninth of Av.

Wild foxes at the site of the destroyed Temple are described specifically in the Talmud.

This story in the Talmud describes foxes on the Temple Mount as a sign that Jerusalem will be rebuilt. This precise scenario was discussed in the Talmud (Makkot 24b). Rabban Gamliel, Rabbi Elazar ben Azaria, Rabbi Joshua and Rabbi Akiva went up to Jerusalem.

When they reached the Temple Mount, they saw a fox emerging from the place of the Holy of Holies.

The others started weeping, but Rabbi Akiva laughed. Rabbi Akiva asked the rabbis why they cried and they explained that to see a wild animal in such a holy place, a place which was forbidden to unfit men, was distressing. Rabbi Akiva noted that this was precisely the reason he laughed. He explained that the fact that the prophecy of Uriah related by the Prophet Micah had come to be was proof that the prophecy of Zechariah would also come to be.

Percentage Of Americans That Believe In God Has Fallen To An All-Time Low

Do you believe in God? If so, you belong to a portion of the population that is steadily shrinking.

Yes, a majority of Americans still think that God exists, but the trend is clearly going in one direction. So are we headed down the same road that so many post-Christian nations in western Europe have already gone down?

According to a shocking new survey that Gallup has just released, the percentage of Americans that believe in God has plunged to the lowest level that they have ever recorded...

The percentages of Americans who believe in each of five religious entities -- God, angels, heaven, hell and the devil -- have edged downward by three to five percentage points since 2016. Still, majorities believe in each, ranging from a high of 74% believing in God to lows of 59% for hell and 58% for the devil. About two-thirds each believe in angels (69%) and heaven (67%).

74 percent may sound high, but it is important to note that this includes anyone that may believe that any sort of a "god" exists.

So this figure would include people from many different religions.
