The U.N. plan to improve the world by 2030 is failing. Does that make it a failure?

What if you made a self-improvement plan and failed to meet your goals.

Imagine that in a moment of unusual optimism and resolve, you decided that the only way you were ever going to be the healthy, happy and productive person you want to be was by writing down a detailed list of goals and committing to accomplish them in the next 15 years.

Now imagine that eight years later, more than halfway through your 15-year life improvement plan, not only are you way off track when it comes to accomplishing most of what you committed to, but in some cases you've even slid backward. Maybe you faced an unexpected illness. Maybe you suffered a crushing breakup. Maybe you got some bad financial advice. Maybe you just didn't try hard enough.

What would you conclude? Were your goals a waste of time or would you be even worse off today without them? Should you scrap your detailed plan or double down and try to make up for lost time?

That's about where 193 world leaders at the United Nations in New York find themselves this week as they take stock of the sobering state of the Sustainable Development Goals at their halfway point along the road to 2030.

But late Tuesday, at nearly the last minute, eleven countries out of 160 filed a formal opposition to the pending proposal to accelerate Agenda 2030. They complained about "unilateral coercive measures," human rights issues, lack of transparency (secret agendas), and procedural complaints (rushing it through).

Now, take a look at which countries stopped Agenda 2030, the unlikeliest group of countries to which you'd think we'd ever owe a major debt of gratitude:

The Russian Federation, Belarus, Bolivia, Cuba, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Eritrea, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Nicaragua, the Syrian Arab Republic, Venezuela, and Zimbabwe.

'Ministry of Truth': Conservatives Warn About Washington State's 'Domestic Terrorism' Effort

Washington's Democratic attorney general released a report late last year urging the state to crack down on domestic terrorism and enlisting an analyst at an organization notorious for putting conservative groups on a "hate map" alongside chapters of the Ku Klux Klan, a map that has inspired at least one act of terrorism.

The attorney general, Bob Ferguson, called on the Washington Legislature to pass a bill launching a commission to study domestic terrorism and urging state action. That bill, HB 1333, stalled in committee earlier this year, but conservative groups in Washington state have raised the alarm that the effort remains a threat to their liberties, and those of anyone else who does not toe the party line.

"As a constitutional lawyer and member of the Washington State Bar Association, I believe this report poses a clear and present danger to the civil rights of those that law enforcement officials deem as holding 'anti-government ideologies' or who communicate 'online disinformation,'" Kevin Snider, chief counsel at a nonprofit law firm, the Pacific Justice Institute, told The Daily Signal in a statement Monday.

"The free speech and press clauses [of the Constitution] rise to their zenith when citizens communicate anti-government sentiments," he noted. "There are numerous laws in place to investigate and prosecute acts of violence. But consider that this report calls for family members to turn in 'someone they suspect may be on the path of radicalization,' government funding of journalists to 'combat misinformation and disinformation,' and recommends the establishment of 'mobile advisory centers' to provide 'advice and guidance on dealing with right-wing extremism.'"

“There can be little doubt that this report provides the building blocks for a police state,” he warned.

HB 1333 “would criminalize certain forms of expression based on what members of a state commission consider to be their definition of ‘domestic extremism,’” Washington Policy Center Director Liv Finne warned in a bill analysis earlier this year. “Creating a state-level ‘Ministry of Truth’ would not only undermine democratic norms, it would have a chilling effect on public debate, freedom of speech, and civic participation in Washington state.”

The report faults the U.S. Code definition of “domestic terrorism” because it “fails to capture the full scope of the problem Washington State faces, which encompasses other forms of extremist and political violence; threats, coercion, and intimidation; online disinformation; extremist recruitment and government infiltration efforts; and the general spread of extreme white supremacist, antigovernment, and other ideologies” (emphasis added).

‘Future Is Digital’ — EU Chief Calls for Global Digital IDs and New U.N. Body to Govern Artificial Intelligence

The world needs international digital ID systems like coronavirus passports and Artificial Intelligence should be regulated by a global body similar to the United Nations’ Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen said on Sunday.

Speaking before the “One Future” session of the G20 Summit in India, the top Eurocrat declared that the “future will be digital” and therefore more globalist institutions will be needed to set boundaries and regulations.

The German politician, who before ascending to her unelected role as EU Commission President served as Berlin's Defence Minister, said: "Today I want to focus on AI and digital infrastructure. As it has been described, AI has risks but also offers tremendous opportunities. The crucial question is how to harness a rapidly changing technology."

During her speech in India, Ursula von der Leyen went on to argue for the global adoption of "digital public infrastructures" along the lines of the coronavirus passport system the EU developed during the Wuhan virus crisis.

"Many of you are familiar with the COVID-19 digital certificate. The EU developed it for itself. The model was so functional and so trusted that 51 countries on 4 continents adopted it for free."

"Today, the WHO uses it as a global standard to facilitate mobility in times of health threats. I want to thank Dr Tedros again for the excellent cooperation," she added.

The European Union is actively trying to introduce a bloc-wide "digital identity" app that would contain a citizen's passport, driver's licence, credit cards and other personal information.

Leaders of the G20 signed a treaty last week to rollout the WEF's "digital IDs" and "cashless societies" which will be mandatory for all people who wish to participate in society.

The G20 leaders have agreed to impose these WEF policies on their populations without giving the public a chance to vote.

The globalist body also revealed that discussions are underway to create strict international regulations for cryptocurrencies, which will allow government's to replace them with central bank digital currencies (CBDCs).

Slaynews.com reports: Indian Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman said that discussions were underway to build a global framework to regulate crypto assets.

Sitharaman said world leaders believe cryptocurrencies cannot be regulated efficiently without total international cooperation.

“India’s [G20] presidency has put on the table key issues related to regulating or understanding that there should be a framework for handling issues related to crypto assets,” Sitharaman said before the G20 gathering.

The top items discussed at the New Delhi summit included “building Digital Public Infrastructure, Digital Economy, Cryptoassets, [Central Bank Digital Currencies].”

CORRUPT SENATOR MARK WARNER PUSHES HIS RESTRICT ACT WHICH WILL END FREEDOM IN AMERICA – IT MUST BE STOPPED

Legacy media has discussed the RESTRICT Act as a measure merely to ban TikTok – a Chinese social media app – even though TikTok is not even mentioned in the bill. The RESTRICT Act is actually a sinister attack on the First Amendment.

This Act is introduced by corrupt Democrat Senator Mark Warner of Russia Collusion fame. Warner was in on the scandal from the start and was behind the request for the Mueller Special Counsel. It was all a lie.

Warner’s RESTRICT Act vastly increases the federal government’s ability to spy on Americans’ online activity and punish them severely for sharing information that opposes the official narrative. But what hasn’t been noticed until now – the RESTRICT Act will provide the federal government with enormous control over American elections.

In other words – the federal government can decide that spying on local election networks is necessary to mitigate any supposed threat from any “foreign” entity and local jurisdictions will not be able to prevent them. In fact, opting out of the Albert Sensor surveillance program will become a federal crime.

Just as the Patriot Act was propped up to monitor the activities of “foreign” terrorism threats, but instead is used against American citizens domestically, the RESTRICT Act will be used against all that question the legitimacy of elections, by making such advocacy a crime.

The Receipts: How the WHO, Gates and Blackrock Want to Take Over the World

Largely unnoticed by the public, the World Health Organization (WHO) is working to significantly expand its powers and usurp far-reaching control through the back door. Alternative for Germany Deputy Chair in the Bundestag Beatrix von Storch reveals the US billionaires behind it and who bought whom.

The WHO is currently working on a comprehensive initiative for pandemic prevention, which includes a Pandemic Treaty and changes to health regulations. These are expected to be decided by no later than May of next year. It's important to understand that the pandemic treaty is only part of the problem. More dangerous are the changes to international health regulations. While the Pandemic Treaty must be ratified as new international law, the changes to international health rules automatically apply to every WHO member unless they explicitly opt out.

Rockefeller, Gates & Bloomberg Foundations Control Global Health

The powerful players in global health are not elected governments, but three private foundations: the Rockefeller Foundation, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, and Bloomberg Philanthropies. Among these, the Rockefeller Foundation, endowed with $5 billion, is by far the smallest, but also the oldest of the three. The Gates Foundation has an endowment of $40 billion US dollars, and Bloomberg Philanthropies has $50 billion.

The Quantum Financial System (QFS): Understanding the Next Generation Blockchain Technology

The Quantum Financial System (QFS) is a next-generation blockchain technology that offers a new level of security and efficiency. Unlike traditional blockchain systems, the QFS is based on a quantum-secure network, which uses the principles of quantum cryptography to ensure the security of transactions. This means that the QFS is immune to hacking, as the quantum-secure network ensures that any attempt to manipulate the system will be immediately detected and thwarted.

The QFS also offers a faster and more efficient transaction process, as it uses a unique consensus algorithm that enables transactions to be processed much quicker than traditional blockchain systems. This means that users can expect faster and more reliable transactions, which can be especially important in the world of finance where time is of the essence.

SOCOM To Deploy Argus AI To Scour Social Media For Disinformation, Misinformation And Malinformation

Annnd... Here we go. If you have not read the background {Go Deep}, you will not have the appropriate context to absorb the latest revelation about how the Dept of Defense will now conduct online monitoring operations, using enhanced AI to protect the U.S. internet from “disinformation” under the auspices of national security.

The US Special Operations Command (USSOCOM) has contracted New York-based Accrete AI to deploy software that detects “real time” disinformation threats on social media.

The company’s Argus anomaly detection AI software analyzes social media data, accurately capturing “emerging narratives” and generating intelligence reports for military forces to speedily neutralize disinformation threats.

“Synthetic media, including AI-generated viral narratives, deep fakes, and other harmful social media-based applications of AI, pose a serious threat to US national security and civil society,” Accrete founder and CEO Prashant Bhuyan said.

“Social media is widely recognized as an unregulated environment where adversaries routinely exploit reasoning vulnerabilities and manipulate behavior through the intentional spread of disinformation.

“USSOCOM is at the tip of the spear in recognizing the critical need to identify and analytically predict social media narratives at an embryonic stage before those narratives evolve and gain traction. Accrete is proud to support USSOCOM’s mission.”

Globalists Readying Their Next Round Of 'Human Extermination' As WHO & UN To Agree On 'New Political Declaration On Pandemics' This Week And It's A Horror Show

According to the September 13th story over at globalist talking heads The Economist titled "How to get ready for the end of the world," with a subtitle of "Britain's latest risk register anticipates the apocalypse in detail," the highest scoring 'threat factor' going forward is, you guessed it, a new "Pandemic." With that globalist run outlet again tying together "Pandemic" with "End of the World" in their readers minds, we shouldn't be at all surprised as they push for the next round of lockdowns, masks and what we all know now to be 'lethal' injections.

That story coming out just as we come into a fall season here in America of CDC Director Mandy Cohen publicly recommending a new COVID vax for everyone over the age of 6 months, claiming the decision was based on extensive data and clinical trials, as Dr. Simone Gold bluntly warns us in this recent tweet, "Pfizer's latest recently received approval based on a study involving 10 mice. It has no efficacy data available and was not tested on humans in the data set." While "Moderna's newest had a two-week trial with 50 people, resulting in one adverse event requiring medical attention. No additional information was included on the adverse event."

Texas Liberals Pray for Drag Queens and 'Divine Diversity'

A bizarre video reportedly from inside the Cathedral of Hope Protestant church in Dallas, Texas, showed scores of drag queens watching while the congregation prayed for "divine diversity."

“We celebrate this divine diversity and commit to lifting up the voices of the LGBTQ+ community, and creating spaces where everyone can thrive,” the congregation declares.

In another video from the service, a liberal pastor can be heard claiming family values “have been hijacked by the religious right,” and “Christianity has been hijacked by culture.”

1,000 People Who Identify as Dogs Gather in Germany: ‘Call Animal Control’

Roughly 1,000 individuals gathered at Germany’s Berlin Potsdamer Platz railroad station, howling and barking in their interactions with each other.

Viral video of the bizarre meetup shows hundreds of people gathered, howling and barking. Many of them can be seen wearing dog-like masks and sitting upright on their knees, as seen in a video shared by the New York Post.

“How nice of mental institutions to allow patients outdoors every once in a while. A win for animal rights at the same time,” one individual wrote, as another made the plea to “call animal control.”

“This has to be a joke right? There’s no way people are doing this!” one exclaimed as another asked the deeper questions.

The video comes as concerns continue to rise as society accepts abnormal behaviors or mental illness as “normal,” whether that be males contending they are actually females or individuals identifying as “trans-species.”

In 2017, Breitbart News highlighted a cosplay merchandise seller from Argentina who spent tens of thousands of dollars to become a “trans-species elf.”

“I want to be an elf, an angel and a fantasy being, my aim is to look inhuman, ethereal, graceful and delicate,” Padron told The Daily Mail at the time.

Musk's Neuralink to start human trial of brain implant for paralysis patients

Billionaire entrepreneur Elon Musk's brain-chip startup Neuralink said on Tuesday it has received approval from an independent review board to begin recruitment for the first human trial of its brain implant for paralysis patients.

Those with paralysis due to cervical spinal cord injury or amyotrophic lateral sclerosis may qualify for the study, it said, but did not reveal how many participants would be enrolled in the trial, which will take about six years to complete.

Clorox products in short supply after cyberattack disrupts operations

A cyberattack at Clorox is causing wide-scale disruption of the company's operations, hampering its ability to make its cleaning materials, Clorox said Monday.

Clorox said some of its products are now in short supply as it has struggled to meet consumer demand during the disruption. Clorox didn't specify which of its products are affected.

The company on Monday revealed in a regulatory filing that it detected unauthorized activity in some of its information technology systems in August. Clorox said it immediately took action to stop the attack, including reducing its operations. It now believes the attack has been contained.

Still, Clorox has not been able to get its manufacturing operations back up to full speed. The company said it is fulfilling and processing orders manually. The company doesn't expect to begin the process of returning to normal operations until next week.
