Tucker Carlson nominated for Antisemite of the Year

Tucker Carlson's name appeared this week on a list no public figure seeks out. StopAntisemitism, a watchdog organization with more than 300,000 followers on X, included the conservative commentator among its finalists for "Antisemite of the Year," an annual designation aimed at spotlighting individuals who amplify antisemitic ideology. His inclusion immediately intensified an already-fraught divide inside the conservative movement, where Carlson's influence remains significant and deeply polarizing.

The nomination follows months of controversy surrounding Carlson's interview with Nick Fuentes, the openly white nationalist activist whose Groyper movement has gained ground among segments of young Republicans. Carlson sat with Fuentes for two hours in October 2025, offering what many observers described as a friendly platform. Fuentes claimed that "organized Jewry in America" was a significant obstacle to a unified society; Carlson offered no objection and praised Fuentes several times. Senior Republicans, including strong pro-Israel voices, condemned the segment as legitimizing Holocaust denial and white nationalism.

Carlson's own comments in that interview sparked additional outrage, including his claim that Christian Zionists such as Senator Ted Cruz and President George W. Bush suffered from a "brain virus" for supporting Israel. Cruz responded that Carlson was spreading a "dangerous poison" aimed at undermining America's most enduring alliance in the Middle East. Carlson also repeated replacement-theology language during a recent broadcast, declaring, "There is no such thing as God's chosen people. This is heresy. God does not choose a people who kill women and children.” Those remarks drew sharp condemnation from Jewish leaders who viewed them as both theologically hostile and politically charged.

Candace Owens Pushes Wild Conspiracy Against Calvary Chapel, Chuck Smith and Jack Hibbs

In recent videos, she has attempted to paint Calvary Chapel’s pro-Israel stance as the product of military or intelligence manipulation, even suggesting links to psychological operations and CIA involvement. These claims rewrite Christian history and ignore the well-documented reality that Calvary Chapel sparked the Jesus Movement, led thousands to Christ, and continues to uphold a clear, scriptural position on Israel rooted in God’s covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Portland Christmas Tree Lighting Turns Into ‘Free Palestine’ Rally

Portland’s annual Christmas tree lighting took an unexpected turn on Friday when a featured speaker used the stage to call Israel’s actions a “full-blown genocide” and led portions of the crowd in chanting “Free Palestine.” The appearance of pro-Palestinian activism at the 41st annual ceremony — attended by thousands in Pioneer Courthouse Square — drew criticism from residents who said the political messaging was out of place at a city-sponsored holiday event.

Portland officials avoided saying the word “Christmas” throughout the program, referring to the Christmas tree only as “the tree.” In addition to stripping Christmas of its name, traditional Christmas songs were renamed “holiday songs,” and the ceremony made no effort to acknowledge Hanukkah, Chag HaUrim, or any other winter holiday. Instead, the event opened with the Strong Woman Song, performed by a representative of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs. She introduced a speaker who immediately launched into commentary on the Israel–Hamas war, calling the ceremony “the perfect time to bring this up.”

White House renames building the “Donald J. Trump Institute of Peace”

The White House has renamed the United States Institute of Peace building to the “Donald J. Trump Institute of Peace.” This executive action, announced on December 3, underscores President Trump’s vision of imprinting his influence on institutions tied to global stability.

The U.S. Institute of Peace (USIP), an independent federal body established in 1984, promotes conflict resolution worldwide. Its Washington headquarters now bears Trump’s name, a decision critics decry as politicizing a nonpartisan entity.

Supporters hail it as recognition of his “America First” foreign policy, which they credit with brokering Middle East deals like the Abraham Accords.

White House officials framed the rename as honoring Trump’s “unparalleled commitment to peace through strength.” A statement highlighted his role in averting wars, contrasting it with predecessors’ records. The change requires no congressional approval, leveraging presidential authority over federal naming.

Assassination Culture Poses A Grave Threat To The Moral And Social Fabric Of America

Alleged murderer Luigi Mangione’s defense fund exceeded $1.36 million in donations this week as assassination culture continues infecting American minds.

A shocking number of people defended Mangione in December of 2024 after he allegedly shot UnitedHealthcare CEO Brian Thompson to death on a Manhattan street. The insurance executive’s slaughter, Mangione fans argue, was an appropriate, necessary response to insurance companies’ greed.

Justifications like these are a product of assassination culture — an ideology which accepts and glorifies political violence against the rich, powerful and politically conservative.

Assassination culture poses a grave threat to the moral and social fabric of America.

A growing number of American adults feel political violence can be at least partially justified in some circumstances, per a recent survey conducted by the Network Contagion Research Institute and Rutgers University's Social Perception Lab.

The survey concluded failure to “explicitly confront and condemn” assassination culture would result in “real-world escalation.”

Five months later, a gunman assassinated Charlier Kirk. His alleged killer, 22-year-old Tyler Robinson, claimed he'd “had enough” of the conservative leader's “hatred.”

Technocrat ‘Brain Weapons’ That Target Perception, Memory and Behavior

This is the state-of-the-art ‘Science Of Social Engineering’ developed through Technocracy. I have been warning about this for 20 years. Convergent science (NBIC, 2000) and Obama's BRAIN Initiative (Brain Research through Advancing Innovative Neurotechnologies, 2013) were pitched as cures for disease. In reality, the military and spook organizations were lurking in the shadows to scoop up mind-altering technologies that could be used to control entire populations.

This article notes, “The same scientific research that is helping to treat neurological disorders can also be used to build weapons which target specific brain functions.”

Fully implantable brain chip aims to restore real speech

FDA approves Paradromics trial for a brain implant that may help people with paralysis communicate in real time

A U.S. neurotechnology startup called Paradromics is gaining momentum in the fast-growing field of brain-computer interfaces. The FDA has approved its first human trial built to test whether its fully implantable device can restore speech for people with paralysis. This milestone gives the Austin company a strong position in a competitive space, shaping the future of neural technology.

Paradromics received Investigational Device Exemption status for the Connect-One Early Feasibility Study using its Connexus BCI. It is the first approved study to explore speech restoration with a fully implantable system. The research team wants to evaluate safety and see how well the device converts neural activity into text or a synthesized voice.

Surgeons place the implant under the skin and connect it with a thin cable to a wireless transceiver in the chest. That transceiver sends data through a secure optical link to a second transceiver worn on the body. The external unit powers the system with inductive charging similar to wireless phone chargers.

British man says he was arrested after posting photos holding guns during July 4 trip to Florida

West Yorkshire Police charged Jon Richelieu-Booth with public order offense before Crown Prosecution Service dropped case

A British IT consultant says he lived through a dystopian nightmare after being arrested for posting photos of himself holding firearms during a trip to the United States.

Jon Richelieu-Booth, owner and director of Phoenix Evolution Consulting, told Fox News Digital the trouble began after he visited friends in Florida over July 4 to celebrate the holiday and his 50th birthday. During the visit, he said he was invited to shoot a gun for the first time.

"They were shooting, and they offered me the opportunity to — as a Brit who'd never handled guns — to handle a gun," he said.

They warned him to be careful about what he posts online. About 10 days later, Richelieu-Booth said, the police returned, forced their way into his home at 10:30 p.m. and arrested him.

He was told the arrest stemmed from the firearm photos and a separate post authorities claimed amounted to "stalking and harassment." He was questioned and held overnight before being released.

About seven weeks later, he said he was arrested again on an allegation that he breached bail, which he says was based on a false complaint. The complaints were tied to a dispute with a former client, Richelieu-Booth says.

West Virginia again bans religious reasons for school vaccine exemptions

The West Virginia Board of Education on Tuesday reinstated a school vaccination mandate after the state Supreme Court paused a lower court's ruling that allowed parents to cite religious beliefs to opt out of shots required for their children to attend classes.

The Supreme Court earlier Tuesday issued a stay in last week's ruling by Raleigh County Circuit Judge Michael Froble in a class-action lawsuit. In issuing an injunction, Froble said children of families who objected to the state's compulsory vaccination law on religious grounds would be allowed to attend school and participate in extracurricular sports.

'I'm giving up pretending to be a man': Methodist pastor tells churchgoers he is 'transitioning,' throws on a wig

Rev. Phillip Phaneuf dropped the bombshell on his congregation a year after the UMC dropped its prohibition on non-straight clergy.

The woke pastor of the North Chili United Methodist Church in Upstate New York recently surprised his congregation with the news that he plans to masquerade as a woman full-time and take cross-sex drugs.

No longer sporting the beard he wore in his headshot photo on the United Methodist of Upper New York website, Rev. Phillip Phaneuf, 51, donned rainbow stoles and told his congregation on Nov. 23, "I am inviting you to join me in a season of creative transformation for myself and, I think, for all of us."

"I'm transitioning. I'm affirming and saying to all of you that I am transgender," continued Phaneuf. "The best way to put this is that I'm not becoming a woman; I'm giving up pretending to be a man."

The Methodist pastor, who is hardly the UMC's first transvestite pastor, called for the Holy Spirit's involvement in the process and cautioned his parishioners about the "fear of the unknown" in such circumstances.
