Trump administration touts Iran deal as a payday for US farmers, but Iran denies it

U.S. President Donald Trump and Vice President JD Vance say their interim deal to end the war with Iran will deliver a financial windfall to American farmers.

But the Iranians deny it. And in the absence of more details, sanctions experts are flummoxed over exactly how billions of dollars' worth of Iranian assets would make their way to the American heartland from the escrow accounts where they've been locked for years by U.S. sanctions.

A tentative agreement reached last week would reopen the Strait of Hormuz, through which a fifth of the world's oil and natural gas once passed, and allow Iran to start selling its oil freely again during a 60-day period when the two countries will continue negotiating key issues. The memorandum of understanding also promised to unfreeze Iranian assets.

Trump's deal has come under fire for failing to address the reasons the president cited for going to war with Iran on Feb. 28, including curbing Tehran's nuclear ambitions, its missile program and its support for militant groups such as Hezbollah in Lebanon and Hamas in Gaza.

Lashing back at critics Tuesday on his Truth Social media platform, Trump said U.S. farmers would get a payday: The U.S. Treasury Department, he wrote, would release the Iranian assets "into escrow, controlled by the U.S.A., and will be used for the purchase of food and medical supplies, exclusively from the United States, including Corn, Wheat, and Soybeans from our great American farmers. These are things that are desperately needed by Iran."

Dispute over nuclear inspections shows how U.S. and Iran are negotiating in public

The head of the U.N.'s nuclear agency said Wednesday that Iranian nuclear enrichment sites would be visited by his inspectors as part of the interim U.S.-Iran deal to reach an end to the war. An Iranian diplomat instead insisted any such visit would only come after a final deal.

The comments echoed contradictory remarks about nuclear inspections a day earlier from the U.S. and Iran. During the week since the two countries signed the deal, their leaders have repeatedly disagreed in public about what that document actually means.

Defending Trump's remark, Vance says Iran needs missiles for 'self-defense,' like Israel

US Vice President JD Vance defends President Donald Trump's assertion that Iran be allowed to keep some of its ballistic missiles, arguing that it needs them for "self-defense," just as Israel has a right to self-defense.

Vance is asked at a White House press conference to explain Trump's apparent shift on that issue, given that the US has previously framed destruction of Iran's missile program as a key war aim.

The vice president begins by noting that the US destroyed “a substantial number” of Iran’s missiles and launchers during the recent war

American pro-Israel activists may have just had their worst week ever
One party is voting for the loudest critics of Israel; the other is cutting a generous deal with Jerusalem’s top adversary; after years of bipartisan support, a new era is dawning

A telling moment in the New York City congressional primaries on Tuesday night came when, near the end of Darializa Avila Chevalier’s victory speech, the crowd began spontaneously chanting, “Free, free Palestine!”

It’s hard to imagine how a candidate could be more anti-Israel than Avila Chevalier, who just ousted a pro-Israel incumbent. But she didn’t directly mention Israel in her speech. When the chant broke out, Avila Chevalier was delivering an energetic but boilerplate line about taking her fight to Washington, DC.

In other words, her base didn’t chant for Palestine because it’s important to her. They chanted because it’s important to them. They didn’t vote for her in spite of her opposition to Israel; they voted for her because of it.

Mamdani-backed primary sweep further cements anti-Zionist politics in NYC

Election wins continue anti-Israel far left’s upward trajectory in the city, and send a message to the Democratic Party leadership

t victory parties for the far-left Democratic Socialists of America in New York City on Tuesday night, crowds chanted “Free Palestine,” railed against the pro-Israel lobby and took aim at the House’s Democratic Party leadership.

“A year ago, it was not the end of a political movement — it was the beginning,” New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani told a crowd, referring to his upset victory in last year’s mayoral race.

In this episode, Tucker Carlson sits down with writer JD Hall to explore the origins of Christian Zionism and how it has shaped—and potentially corrupted—American Christianity. They delve into the theological concepts of dispensationalism versus covenant theology, questioning the historical and spiritual foundations of modern political support for Israel. The discussion challenges commonly held beliefs about the biblical promises regarding the Jewish people, offering a provocative look at how these interpretations influence current political and moral stances.

JD HALL: Well, Jesus’s role in dispensational theology— so it depends to whom. So John Nelson Darby, the inventor of dispensationalism, referred to the church, the Christian church, as a parenthesis— that God’s main plan is Israel, but because they’ve been naughty and disobedient, the church comes in and we’re a parenthesis. So instead of being like the bride of Christ, the church is more like a summer fling. This is where the rapture comes in, that eventually God will rapture us, take us out, we’re gone completely, and then Israel can resume its role as the big picture.

TUCKER CARLSON: So Darby comes up with this, as you said, novel theology, cultish theology, non-traditional Christian theology, but it’s disseminated effectively by this guy Scofield, the family abandoner.

Christian Zionists insist the United States must unconditionally support Benjamin Netanyahu's government because of Genesis 12:3. "And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee," the verse reads.

Mike Huckabee, Ted Cruz, and others like them claim "thee" refers to the nation-state of Israel. But does it? Biblical scholar JD Hall says the answer is no. Instead, he believes Paul's letters to the Galatians show that "thee" means all followers of Jesus.

Given that Cruz and Huckabee's interpretation has come to dictate U.S. foreign policy, Americans should understand that it is not necessarily correct. In fact, it makes no inherent sense. Hall joined The Tucker Carlson Show to reveal why, plus explain how ideological radicals have inverted the Old Testament, the ways forces that reject the authority of Jesus seek to exploit him for political gain, the truth of how Muslims view Christianity, and more.

Before the COVID-19 pandemic, Anthony Fauci, as head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), provided millions in US taxpayer dollars to fund dangerous gain-of-function research on bat coronaviruses at the Wuhan Institute of Virology (WIV)—work which is now widely viewed as the source of the unintentional lab leak that sparked the pandemic.

FDA Advisers Recommend Approving First mRNA Influenza Vaccine

Moderna's vaccine is the first influenza shot to contain messenger ribonucleic acid.

The Food and Drug Administration should approve the first messenger ribonucleic acid (mRNA) vaccine for influenza, the agency's vaccine advisory panel said on June 18.

The Vaccines and Related Biological Products Advisory Committee in a unanimous vote advised the FDA to approve an mRNA flu shot from Moderna for adults aged 50 and older.

Multiple committee members who voted in favor of approval have connections to Moderna, including El Sahly and Dr. Flor Munoz, who was a Moderna adviser from 2022 to 2024 and helped craft recommendations for pregnant women to receive COVID-19 vaccines. None of those members declared conflicts of interest on June 18.

In the shadow of the war in the north, an innocent red calf was born in a dairy farm in the Galilee Mountains.

Shai Givon, who specializes in artificial insemination in dairy farms and cattle farms on behalf of the "Ferion" company, discovered that a completely red calf was born in a dairy farm in the north of the country from the insemination he performed on a dairy cow nine months ago. The cow, as mentioned, was inseminated with a Red Angus breed.
