Knowing someone of good character can be captivating and motivating, but it can also be discouraging.

The Nature of Godly character

Godly character is often momentary, not extraordinary.

Godly character is not defined by suffering or “failure.”

Godly character is caught as much as it is taught.

The example of Godly character

Timothy was an example of doing nothing out of selfish ambition or conceit.

Epaphroditus was an example of doing everything without grumbling and arguing.

Paul was an example of true rejoicing.

The Beauty of Godly character

Godly character is achievable.

Godly character is attractive.
