

Week 4

What an INCREDIBLE journey we have taken together this month! I know Adam and I both have had our eyes opened as we have re-discovered our history as a country and we hope you have been educated, equipped and empowered to begin studying and looking for truth on your own!

Here are a list of resources as you begin to look into local and state elections:

Tennessee

Tennessee Secretary of State website will give you all the voting information you need to know. From here, you can look up your polling locations, what districts you are voting for, and all federal and state candidate lists.

Chattanooga residents, here is a great breakdown of the local elections, including lists of all candidates and links to their platforms, maps to identify your districts, explanations of ordinances and even a list of local commissioners and town councils that are being voted on.

For residents of Hamilton County, the Hamilton County Election Commission will provide more local information and allow you to look at a sample ballot to see what specific ordinances you'll be voting on before you head to the polls.

Here is a list of the Hamilton County School Board Members and the list of previous meetings so you can get an idea of what they are discussing.

Don't live in Hamilton County? Here are some local election commission websites:

Bradley County

Sequatchie County

Georgia

Georgia Secretary of State website provides quick links to all the election and voting information you're looking for. From here, you can choose your county of residence and find out all the candidates running in your area, from national to state to local.

Walker County residents, from here you can find out all your polling locations, look at sample ballots and check out precinct maps. Here is your list of school board members, including all contact information and list of upcoming meetings.

If you are still praying about who to vote for, or have friends and family asking you to help them discover the party platforms, here are direct links to both. You'll also see a 13-page comparison guide, which gives page numbers to the corresponding platforms if you would like to check for accuracy.
