A Closer Look at Psalm 139

How does David initially react to God's presence?

What aspect of God's character does David embrace?

How does David change his response to God's presence?

Fredrich Nietzsche, the atheist German philosopher, once famously declared "God is dead". In his book Thus Spoke Zarathustra, the character called the Ugliest Man 'murdered' God, unwilling to accept a being who could see all of his hidden faults and shortcomings. Nietzsche's

But he had to die: he saw with eyes that saw everything; he saw man's depths and ultimate grounds, all his concealed disgrace and ugliness. His pity knew no shame: he crawled into my dirtiest nooks. This most curious, obtrusive, overpitying one had to die. He always saw me: on such a witness I wanted revenge or not to live myself. The God who saw everything, even man—this god has to die. Man cannot bear it that such a witness should live.
